

THE CATHOLIC PARLIAMENTARY LIAISON OFFICE and the HANNS SEIDEL FOUNDATION

cordially invite you to participate in a Roundtable Discussion on

The Need for an Anti-Corruption Commission

It is often assumed that the main job of the office of the Public Protector is to fight corruption, but the PP's mandate is much broader than that. The National Prosecuting Authority and the Hawks tend to respond only to specific complaints, and they both also have many other tasks to attend to. In any event, as our recent history shows, these institutions cannot always be relied upon to tackle the complex and politicised world of corruption effectively. For some time, therefore, activists have been calling for South Africa to set up a dedicated, independent Anti-Corruption Commission, or Integrity Commission, possibly with the same constitutional status as the other Chapter 9 Institutions. Join us to discuss what such a body should look like, what its mandate should be, and who should serve on it.
